8 July 2024

Dear Sir or Madam,

I write in order to make corrections to the Statement of Evidence I submitted to the IPC in my email dated 4 July 2024.

Under part 3 of my email, with the title: "My decision to cancel the booking and request a refund", I had stated that my telephone calls to Mytrip's and to Xiamen Airlines' customer services had occurred on 1 and 2 June. That information was inaccurate. The information had been based upon my recollection only as my telephone records were temporarily unavailable at the time of writing that statement.

My first call to Mytrip's customer services (on +17864058511) was made on 30 May 2024 at 13:48 BST and lasted 39 minutes. I have a recording of that call during which the call handler can clearly be heard to quote the two Xiamen Airlines booking references for my flights as detailed in my email ("KG7EUI" and "PGKPWH").

My second call to Mytrip's customer services was made on its alternative number: +18446295557 on 31 May 2024. I made two calls to that number on that date timed at 14:15 and 14:27 BST, each lasting 5 minutes. These calls were not recorded by myself.

My single call to Xiamen Airlines customer services was made on 1 June 2024 at 04:17 BST to the number: +1855789557. The call lasted 25 minutes and was recorded by myself; however I do not think its content is of any evidential significance. This call therefore did not precede my second call(s) to Mytrip's customer services as incorrectly stated in my email.

These are the only corrections that are necessary to the information provided in my email of 4 July – all other references to dates in that email are accurate and were made based upon available documentary material.

Should the Ministry of Foreign Affairs have a requirement for copies of the call recordings referred to above, I would be happy to discuss terms and arrangements for their supply.

Yours faithfully,

Michael Stanley Jones
